DENTAL HEALTH CARE SERVICE

DEPARTMENT OF DENTISTRY

Dentistry involves the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of a wide variety of conditions, disorders, and diseases, affecting the teeth, gums, and maxillofacial (associated with the jaw & face) region of the body.

Although typically associated with preventive and restorative dentistry, many dentist's pursue additional training in order to provide cosmetic services such as teeth whitening and porcelain veneers to enhance one's smile and instill self-confidence.

Your general dentist will work with you to develop a customized dental hygiene plan that incorporates dental examination, teeth cleaning, possible tooth scaling, X-ray, and use of other diagnostic equipment to prevent, uncover, or treat problems as early as possible. Your dentist may incorporate a variety of restorative procedures in the development of a comprehensive treatment plan that will help prevent decay or disease of the teeth, mouth, gums, and tongue. General dentists also use restorative dentistry procedures to repair the effects of tooth decay, trauma, defect, or disease in these areas of the mouth.

Fillings: A procedure used to cover tooth decay and cavities. Fillings can also repair injured teeth. After evaluation and x-rays are done, if a filling is needed then it is preceded.

Root Canals: This procedure removes infected tissues that are inside the root of the tooth. Dentists use anti-bacterial fillings and then the tooth is capped by a crown

Crowns: These crowns are made of porcelain, gold, silver and a combination of porcelain and metal. These crowns repair decayed and completely damaged teeth.

Bridges: Replacing missing teeth by using pontic, these artificial replacements are placed around the teeth.

Dentures: This is also a procedure to replace damaged and missing teeth.

Tooth extractions: A procedure done to remove badly decayed or injured teeth.
